From Lori:

- The Witches are Coming by Lindy West. Oh, my goodness, what an excellent skewering of our misogynist, racist culture by this very brilliant feminist. I highly recommend it.
- The Resisters by Gish Jen. "An audacious marvel of a novel about baseball and a future America."
- Bird Summons by Leila Aboulela. "An enchanting, heartfelt novel about three Muslim women in search of freedom, faith, and happiness."
- Dear Edward by Ann Napolitano. "A highly publicized plane crash leaves the survivor to find normalcy again while under the glare of media fascination."
- The Cook by Maylis de Kerangal, "A coming-of-age journey centered on Mauro, a young self-taught cook."
- Such a Fun Age by Kiley Reid. "A page-turning and big-hearted story about race and privilege."
- The Doctor's Farmacy, podcast by Dr. Mark Hyman, functional medicine physician, drhyman.com

From Susan:

- Dear Edward by Ann Napolitano. Excellent
- The Night Watchman by Louise Erdrich. Excellent
- War and Peace by Leo Tolstoy. (Reading with Yiyun Li in a virtual book club via a public place #TolstoyTogether.) Excellent.
- Indelicacy by Amina Cain. Very unusual.
- Children Of Blood And Bone by Tom I Adeyemi. Takes place in Nigeria; roughly inspired by the Yoruba tribe. First of a trilogy. I liked it.

From Maria:

- Indelicacy by Amina Cain.
- Dear Edward by Ann Napolitano. I thought I would not like it because it is about a plane crash. However, the author does a marvelous job of juxtaposing grief and friendship.
- Manderley Forever by Tatiana de Rosay. Fascinating biography of Daphne du Maurier
- Britt-Marie Was Here by our never-fails-to-please Fredrik Backman
- The Princess Diarist by one extremely funny Carrie Fisher
- H is for Hawk by Helen Macdonald. Made me want to find a Goshawk webcam
- The Science of Well Being free class from Yale via Coursera (the most popular course in the school's history)
